

My name is Ravi Singh

At the tender age of three, I was diagnosed with autism. It was a pivotal moment not just for me, but for my entire family. In the face of limited resources for adults on the autism spectrum, my mother, Sherry Singh, took bold action. She founded The Whole Spectrum Autism Foundation, driven by the deep-seated belief that every individual, regardless of their neurodiversity, deserves acceptance and inclusion.

The foundation stands as a beacon of hope, tirelessly advocating for autism acceptance and fostering an environment of inclusivity. Through a myriad of community engagements, we strive to amplify the voices of families like ours, whose journey with autism is as unique as it is challenging.

One of the cornerstones of our work lies in organizing family-friendly inclusive events throughout the year. These events are not just for individuals on the spectrum, but for their families too. We understand the immense difficulty families face in finding spaces where they can come together, bond, and participate in activities without barriers. Therefore, we ensure that not only the individual on the spectrum is catered to, but also that their families - up to three or four members - are warmly welcomed and accommodated.

Our mission is simple yet profound: to create a world where individuals on the autism spectrum and their families feel valued, understood, and embraced. Through our unwavering commitment, we hope to pave the way for a future where inclusion is not just a goal, but a reality for all.

Whole Spectrum Founder Sherry Singh

The foundation isn't just an organization—it's my heartbeat, pulsating with the rhythm of advocacy and education. We raise autism acceptance through year-round family-friendly, inclusive events, recognizing that autism isn't confined to a day or a month; it's woven into the fabric of daily life for many of us. By fostering dialogue and promoting understanding, we aim to build truly inclusive communities where everyone feels valued and embraced.
